
HOW AND WHEN YOU MAY TALK IN THE SYNAGOGUE

The synagogue is G-d's house. Halacha (Jewish law) requires that it be treated with great respect, and places various restrictions on when and how one may talk there.

Your rabbi is available to inform you regarding the provisions of Jewish law in this as in other matters.

What should you do if someone speaks to you when talking is not allowed? It is suggested that your response be to move your finger back and forth near the top lines on this page. Or, you might put one finger to your lips and smile.

Sponsored by the National Council of Young Israel
Published, as a public service, by the
Harry & Jane Fischel Foundation